W. Ivey Gilmore, Jr.

MEDIATOR · ARBITRATOR · TRIAL ATTORNEY

Every Seat at the Table.

Claims Adjuster. Defense Counsel. Plaintiff's Counsel. Expert Witness. Arbitrator. Now, Mediator.

Ivey Gilmore has spent more than 35 years in claims and litigation, first as an insurance adjuster and, since 1999, as a trial lawyer representing both plaintiffs and defendants. He brings that perspective to every mediation, helping parties and counsel reach practical resolutions in cases ranging from a single claimant to complex disputes involving numerous parties and carriers.

Built for Multi-Party Cases

Construction defect cases rarely have just two sides. Ivey has litigated multi-party construction cases across the industrial, commercial, and residential arenas on behalf of developers, general contractors, subcontractors, and material suppliers, and he has both defended and sued architects, engineers, and design professionals. He knows how risk gets divided among co-defendants and their carriers, and how to keep a crowded room moving toward agreement.

CASES HE MEDIATES

"I've been the adjuster, the defense lawyer, and the plaintiff's lawyer in the room. I know what each side needs to get a case resolved."

— W. IVEY GILMORE, JR.

EXPERIENCE

Decades on Both Sides of the Case.

Before he ever mediated a case, Ivey spent nearly a decade adjusting claims and more than 25 years litigating them. That background lets him evaluate a case the way an adjuster, a defense lawyer, and a plaintiff's lawyer each would.

- Filed and defended wrongful death and bad-faith cases
- Litigated automobile and trucking cases for plaintiffs and defendants
- Handled all types of insurance cases for insurers, defendants, and plaintiffs
- Litigated multi-party construction defect cases for developers, general contractors, subcontractors, and material suppliers on industrial, commercial, and residential projects
- Defended and sued architects, engineers, and design professionals
- Handled more than 1,000 premises liability cases for plaintiffs and defendants
- Served as an expert witness in insurance matters for plaintiffs and defendants
- Served as an arbitrator
